1. Features of the Meiji University Exchange Student Program

(1) Classes

Of the 13,000 class sessions offered at Meiji University, 12,000 are conducted in Japanese. For this reason, those applying for admission to the exchange student program are generally required to have a certain level of Japanese-language proficiency. (However, the English Track of the school of Global Japanese Studies, the English Track of the graduate school of Governance Studies, the International Program in Architecture and Urban Design of the graduate school of Science and Technology and the graduate school of Global Governance or will be taking classes in English in the school of Business Administration/ school of Political Science and Economics/ graduate school of Business Administration/ graduate school of Global Business do not require Japanese-language skills.)

(2) Academic Advisors

Academic advisors provide assistance in creating study plans according to the interview held at Meiji University and consultation for study and student life. Upon their arrival in Japan, exchange students will meet with their academic advisors and create study plans. There may be restrictions on the classes a student may take based on their Japanese proficiency level.

Undergraduate exchange students (other than the school of Commerce, the school of Science and Technology and the school of Agriculture) are assigned the academic advisor according to preferred field of study, preferred classes at Meiji, language proficiency (Japanese or English) and study plan.

(3) Supervisors, Seminars/Laboratories (“Zemi”)

- ① Supervisors provide instruction directly to students in seminars/laboratories (“zemi”). Seminars/laboratories are comprised of 10–20 students and encourage active discussions with the supervisors. Students participating in these seminars/laboratories are able to interact with other students (excluding students in the English Track of the Graduate School of Governance Studies).
- ② Not all students can participate in the seminars/laboratories. Participation depends on Japanese-language proficiency and the number of seats available. Upon their arrival in Japan, exchange students will meet with their academic advisors and create study plans that include these seminars/laboratories if appropriate.
- ③ Students accepted into the English Track of the Graduate School of Governance Studies will not participate in a seminar. However, they must take a course called “research methods” conducted during their study-abroad term taught by the supervisor the graduate school assigns to them. They must also take at least one class taught by that supervisor.

<Notes>

Applicants to the school of Commerce, the school of Science and Technology, the school of Agriculture and graduate schools are required to choose the preferred supervisors in the online application. Please note you are not necessarily assigned the supervisor which you chose in the online application. Supervisor is decided by your undergraduate/graduate school according to the interview held at Meiji University.
